G1 Sentence structures and punctuation

- A sentence must contain a verb, a subject, and a complete idea. It also must start with a capital and end with a . or ! or ?.
- There are 3 types of sentences:

- Simple sentences: contains a verb, only one subject, and a complete idea. It's an independent clause meaning it does not need another sentence to illustrate it's meaning. Ex: I like eating chocolate ice-cream.

- Co-ordinating Conjuctions: Are words that join together 2 nouns, 2 verbs, 2 adjectives, or 2 phrases. They consist of 7 words that can be memorized with the word FANBOYS where:
- F for for
- A for and
- N for nor
- B for but
- O for or
- Y for yet
- S for so

- In simple sentences, comas are not used when we use a FANBOY. They are only used when we list 2 or more things. Ex: Ice-cream and gelato are two popular desserts. Ex2: I like ice-cream, gelato, and pudding. Ex3: The old castle seemed grand yet mysterious. In the previous example we didn't use a coma with yet here because it is a simple sentence.

- Compound sentences are basically two simple sentences (two independent clauses) joined together with a FANBOY (coordinating conjuction). In compound sentences we add a coma before the Coordinating conjuction, for example: I studied really hard for the major exams , but I didn't study physics. However, we don't add a coma before the conjuction If the sentence is too short like: 'I like math but Ali likes English'. Also, two independent clauses can be joined using a semicolon ; instead of a coma and a conjuction.

- Complex sentences: it consists of a dependent clause (a sentence that does not give a complete idea) and an independent clause joined together by a subordinating conjuction. Ex: Even though I have studied really hard for the major exams, I didn't score well in physics. in this example the red sentence is the dependent while the other is the independent. We only use a coma if we start with the dependent clause , but if it ends with the dependent clause we don't use a coma. Ex: I got an A+ in my English writing task although I didn't study for it. BUT we use the comma in both cases if we are contrasting or using a non-defining relative clause (G5)

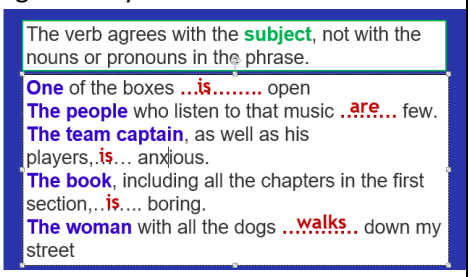

G2 Fragments and Run-ons

- A fragment is a sentence that misses a verb or a subject or the complete idea.
- Run-on sentences are two independent clauses joined together by an improper conjuction or punctuation.
- To fix the run-on sentences we use a semicolon or a comma with a conjuction. But we can't use a comma alone.

G3 Subject-verb agreement

- Subject-verb agreement has 8 main rules that are:
- 1 : when two or more pronouns or nouns are joined using and we use a plural verb
- 2: when two or more pronouns or nouns are connected by or or nor we use a singular verb
- 3: when both a singular and a plural pronouns or nouns are connected by or or nor we use whatever is nearer to the subject. Ex: Neither my uncle nor my brothers are interested in playing football. Here the verb is nearer to the word brothers
- 4: When starting with a gerund, we use a singular verb. Ex: Doing exercises is good for your health
- 5: The verb agrees with the main subject, not with the nouns and pronouns.
- 6: Each, each one, either, neither, everyone, everybody, anybody, anyone nobody, somebody, someone and no one are singular and we use a singular with them and All , some , none depends on the sentence they're used in (they can be plural or singular) with countable they are plural with uncountable they are unplural.

- 7: the word (The number of :) gets a singular while the word (A number of) gets plural.
- 8: group, team, committee, class, crowd, crew, and family are all singular

G4 : Present Perfect and Past Simple

- Present Perfect is used to describe an action that happened in the past and the results are still relevant.
- Have/has + past participle (verb 3)
- We use present perfect for things that happened in the past, at an undetermined time.
- We use present perfect for things that started in the past and have continued into the present
- We use present perfect for something that started in the past and has just finished.
- Present Perfect Keywords: for, yet, never, ever, just, already, since, still, now

- Past Simple We use the past simple to talk about something that happened at a specific time in the past and is finished. Structure: Subject + V2. Keywords: yesterday , ANY last (last month , day , night , year) and a specific time like in 1994, in 2024 , in 1946.

G5 Relative Clauses

- Relative Clauses : a group of words commonly used to identify or define a noun.
- person - who, whose, that Who is more formal than that.
- place – where, which, that
- thing – which, that
- time - when, that
- Where is used for a place and is followed by a noun or pronoun.
- Which/that is used for a place and is followed by a verb.
- Defining relative clauses : gives essential and necessary information Ex: Can you give me the pencil which I gave you this morning? In this example it is a defining clause because extra information is needed to know which pencil he wants.
- Non-defining relative clauses: give extra, unneeded information. Ex: I bought a new car, which I have payed a lot for it, and it works very well. Here he gave extra unneeded information for the reader saying he payed a lot for it

G6: Past Modals (check the powerpoint presentations for example sentences)

- Past modals consists of three main modals : could have, should have, would have.
- Could have: use could have when something was possible in the past, or you had the ability to do it, but you didn't do it
- Use could have: when something wasn't possible in the past, even if you had wanted to do it.
- Use could have to make a guess about something in the past
- use should have to indicate a good idea that did not happen in the past. It's used for late advice or for regret.
- use should have for something you assume has already happened (if everything is ok). It's often used with 'by now'.
- use should have to talk about something that you expected to happen but it didn't happen. Used for surprise or concern.
- Would have used when you wanted to do something in the past but you were not able to. It is often used with BUT.
- It also describes an action or activity that did not take place, but would definitely would have happened if the right condition had occurred first

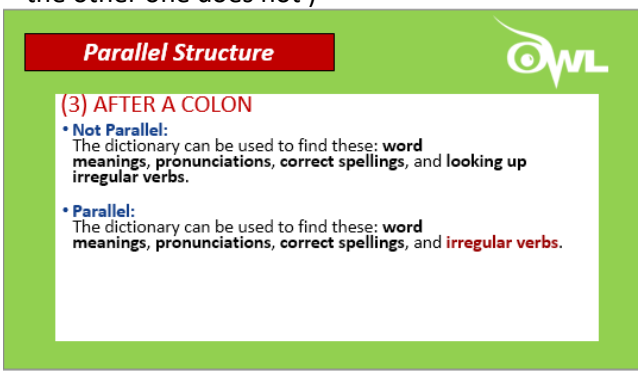

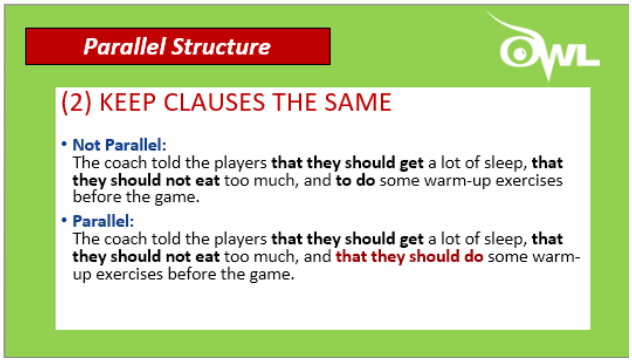

G7 If Conditionals

- Zero Conditional : If + Present Simple + Present Simple. Used for scientific facts and real situations.
- First Conditional : Used to describe real possibilities and situations that can happen in the future
  If + Present Simple + Future Simple (will+base verb)
- Second Conditional : Used to describe the future and possible results of a condition. It refers to mostly unlikely events to happen (almost impossible). If + Past Simple + Would + Base Verb
- Third Conditional : If + Past Perfect + Would have + Verb 3. Used to talk about a condition in the past that did not happen.

G8 Parallel Structures

- Parallel structure means using the same pattern of words (especially to show that two or more ideas have the same level of importance).
- Example of parallel: Majid likes hiking , swimming , and playing football. (they all have ing)
- Example of not parallel : Khalid likes hiking , swimming, and likes to play football. (only the first 2 has ing while the other one does not)

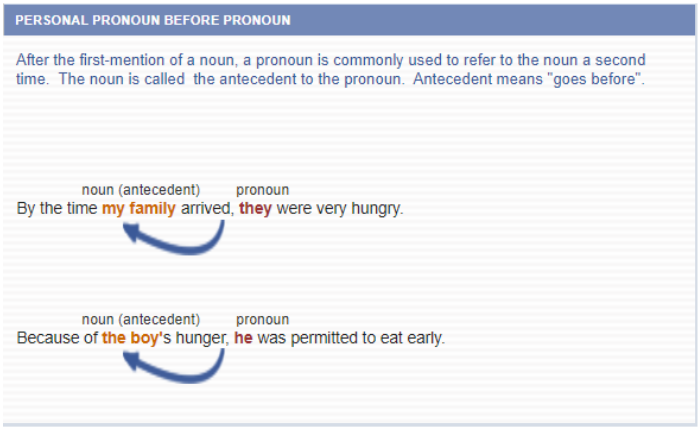

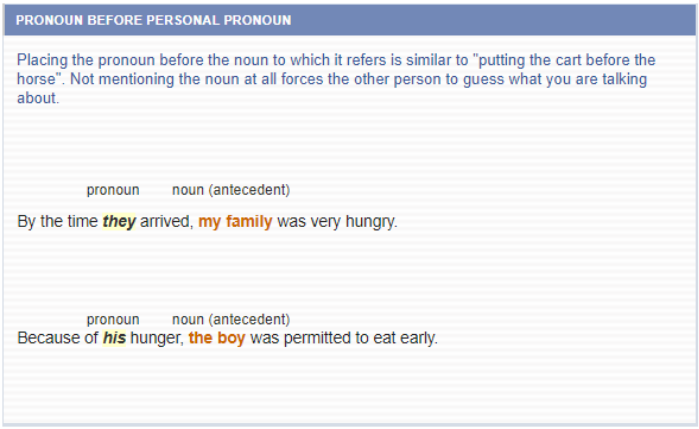

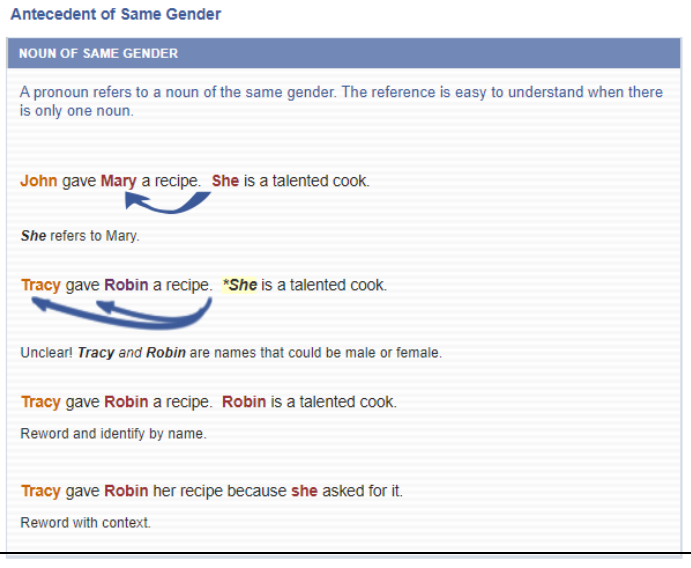

Possessives

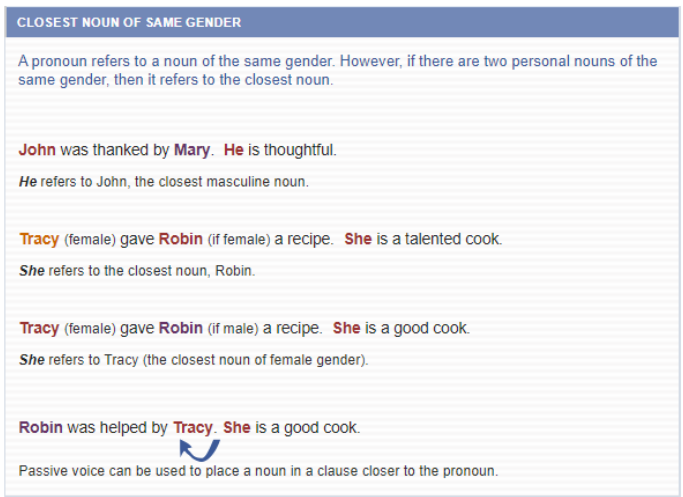

- The possessive adjectives in English are: my, your, his, her, its, our and their. They say who something belongs to. Ex: I have a bag, It is my bag
- Possessive pronouns also say who something belongs to, but they replace the noun. So we use them alone. In this case, we don't use 'its'. In English, the possessive pronouns are: mine, yours, his, hers, ours and theirs. Ex: I have a bag, it is mine.

Pronoun Reference

Gerunds and Infinitive

- Gerund : A gerund is the -ing form of a verb that functions as a noun.
- Gerunds can be the subject or the object of a sentence, also they appear after a preposition.
- Verbs that Take Gerunds: enjoy, avoid, consider, finish, suggest, keep, avoid, recommend.
- Infinitive : An infinitive is the base form of a verb. It's used to show a purpose of something Ex: I went to the store to buy milk.
- To + inf is used in certain situations like:
- After certain verbs like want, need, hope, plan, decide, agree , ask , learn, help.
- After adjectives
- Bare infinitives (without to) come in use in:
- After modal verbs
- After let , make , help
- After verbs of perception
- After ' Why '

More tenses (refer to https://www.grammarly.com/blog/parts-of-speech/verb-tenses/)

- Past Perfect : used when you are talking about two different actions in the past and want to show that one happened before the other. Action 1 is always the past perfect , Action 2 is the past simple
- Had + V3
- Keywords : When , Before , By the time
- Ex : By the time (keyword) the lecture started (second action) , we had already arrived at the class (first action)

- Past Continuous : We use past continuous to show an ongoing action in the past that was interrupted by another action.

- Was / were + Ving Keywords : When

- Example 1 : I was studying when the power went out. (the power going out interrupted my studying)

- Example 2 : They were watching a movie when it started raining (the rain interrupted their movie watching)

- Past Perfect Continuous : describes ongoing actions that happened before another action or time in the past, rather than a single completed event.
- Had been + ving Keywords : until , before. The first action is past perfect continuous the second is the past simple
- Example : He had been running for an hour before it started raining. (the running (first event) was ongoing for a hour before it started to rain.)

- Present Simple : Used to describe habits , facts , and schedules. It takes the base verb.

- Present Continuous : describes actions that are currently happening or ongoing. Subject + am/is/are + ving

- Present Perfect Continuous : Shows an ongoing event in the present that started in the past

- Have / has been + ving

- Example : She has been running , so she is tired now.

- Future Simple : events that will happen in the future , will + v1

- Future Perfect : will + have + v3 , shows an action that will be completed in the future by a specified time.

- Future Continuous : tense for future actions happening over a period of time, especially when a specific time is mentioned. The future continuous tense also shows more certainty and likelihood than the simple future. Will + be + ving

- Future Perfect Continuous : depicts future ongoing actions that continue up until a certain point. Like the future perfect and future continuous, it's used with a specified time. Will + have been + ving

---